Hard Fighting Expected Before Reaching the City.

MEMPHIS, Saturday, June 14.

The Grenada (Memphis) Appeal, of the 13th, contains the following:

AUGUSTA, Ga., June 11.

"Fighting continues in the vicinity of Charleston. This paper went to the City this morning contain the particulars of a sharp engagement on James Island. On Tuesday afternoon, which continued until dark, our forces consisting of three regiments and one battalion of infantry, and four batteries, under command of Gen. W. D. Smith. The enemy were under the protection of felled trees and gunboats.

Col. Wilkinson, of the Forty-sixth Georgia Regiment, was fatally wounded. Our loss is estimated at from forty to 60, principally Georgians—that of the enemy is thought to be large.

The Confederates succeeded in driving the Yankees from the piece of woods they were trying to occupy.

Col. Lucas, at Secessionville, kept up a fire on the enemy's boats and their land camp, and on Monday disabled a Yankee propeller. A Federal prisoner, taken on Monday, reports their force on James Island as sixteen regiments, and a few more were expected shortly.

It was reported at Charleston that the steamer Giraf, from Charleston for Nassau, with cotton, had been captured by the enemy."

OUR PORT ROYAL CORRESPONDENCE.

The Landing on James Island—Brisk Skirmishing—A Battery Captured.

PORT ROYAL, Thursday, June 12.

The forces under the command of Brig.-Gen. Wagner, crossed from Edisto Island to Seabrook's Point on the 9th, 10th and 11th May. The Sixth Connecticut was the first regiment landed and were the most on advance. They had a skirmish with the rebel pickets on Sunday morning, June 1, and at the second attempt, drove the enemy across the river and obtained possession of the bridge.

On the 1st and 2d, General HUNTER, BERNARD and STEVENS proceeded to Stono Inlet, with all the available force of their command, accompanied by eight of our gunboats. The troops were landed on James Island without opposition. This is accounted for by the fact that for two days previous the gunboats Huron, Unadilla and Ottawa had been busy in shelling out the rebel works and had compelled their evacuation.

On Thursday, the 5th, the report reached Port Royal that our troops on James Island had been repulsed with considerable loss, but when the truth was ascertained, the facts were found to be as follows: Two companies of the "Rosenhead" (Penn.) Regiment, had penetrated a little too far within the enemy's lines, and had their retreat cut off. The Eighth Michigan were ordered to their relief, and succeeded in driving off the enemy, who retreated, carrying off Capt. CARR, of the "Rosenheads," and eight or ten privates, as prisoners. Adjt. HENRY WALLACE, of a South Carolina regiment, was captured by our forces.

Meanwhile, the position of Gen. WAGNER was a matter of doubt. We feared that his whole brigade was "bagged," but information reached here on the 6th that the General had succeeded in getting in the rear of a battery on the Stono river, near its junction with Wahoo Cut, and was preparing for an attack. The gunboats were shelling the woods on each side of the Stono, and engaging the battery in front. Of the strength of this work we have not reliable information, but it is supposed to mount nine guns. One is known to be a formidable piece, throwing a shell two and a half miles. There are rumors, which lack confirmation, that Gen. STEVENS has succeeded in taking this position.

On the 7th, courtesy from Otter Island reported the commencement of heavy firing at Stono at 3 A. M., and the signal officers stated that on the night preceding the rebels crossed from the main to Ladies Island in force, contemplating an attack on Beaufort. Capt. DUPONT dispatched two gunboats to Port Royal ferry to prevent the crossing. Later reports were to the effect that our pickets had been driven in, but the rumors all proved to be false. They sufficed, however, to produce an exodus on the fire part of the inhabitants of Beaufort. They have since returned to their homes and all is quiet.

Our latest information from the division advancing toward Charleston is to the following effect: On Tuesday, P. M., the Ninety-seventh Pennsylvania, Forty-seventh New-York and two companies of the Sixth Connecticut, were attacked at a point distant three miles from Gen. STEVENS' position, by a large force of rebels. The fight was warmly contested for over two hours, and ended with the rout of the rebels, with loss as follows: 17 killed, six prisoners and about 30 wounded. The killed were buried by our troops. Our loss was three of the Ninety-seventh killed and 12 wounded. The rebels is represented as having been close, but our boys fought like heroes. The next day an attack was made on a battery situate a half-mile in advance of the ground contested as above. The Eighth Michigan and Seventy-ninth New-York charged upon the rebels in gallant style, drove them from their works, captured three of the guns, and destroyed the remaining one. Our troops behaved nobly. The General in command speak in flattering terms of their daring.

Among the prisoners captured on the 10th are some officers who have just arrived at Hilton Head. They tell us that we must fight every inch of our way to Charleston—batteries line all the approaches to the city. I believe this to be true, and that many an hour of hard fighting must come before we reach the core of the rebellion.

FROM ANOTHER CORRESPONDENT.

HILTON HEAD, S. C., Friday, June 13, 1862.

After two weeks of excitement and alarm, matters have become quiet, and we are floating again on the waves of peace.

The expedition to Charleston was a failure in the history of Stono River, and could have told the same story, though not yet a gallant Colonel, who still lay between life and death, and yet a fine alarm. Three thousand rebels had massed on Ladies and Port Royal islands, and were expected on Beaufort. Reinforcements were hurried in double quick time; steamers were armed, extra guards placed, reinforcements ordered from other points, to support the Colonel abroad, and matters generally wore a sanguinary look. But the rebels did not come; why, we don't know; but we strongly suspect they were engaged elsewhere on more important business. A small-sized reconnoitre since obtained the information that you had been small in a reconnoitre in force without reason. The commanding officer with was able to hold about in emergency, and most likely his case will receive the attention of the Commanding General very soon. A few weeks were born a week ago on the main land across the River point of Pinckney Island. They had no doubt Gen. Pickett did not wish them to use the tools. Dr. Capt. CONRY, of the Forty-fifth Pennsylvania Regiment, sent over a company of men, and relieved them of the responsibility. They are now where Uncle Sam's hogeons use them when the proper time arrives.

Gen. HUNTER has returned from Charleston. Gen. BERNARD remains there in command. Matters will now make quite for the development of certain plans. The Commanding General is perfect master of the situation and his full of Charleston will become a matter of history very soon. In the skirmishes that has taken place on James Island our troops have shown themselves steadily fighting men. The Massachusetts Twenty-eighth have received its "baptism of fire," and it amply sustained the honor of the old Bay State. CAPT. RILEY, of Company F, I understand, was personally complimented by Gen. HUNTER for his bravery, and the skillful manner in which he handled his company in taking a battery. The Michigan Eighth and the New-York Seventy-ninth Regiments are also spoken of very highly. The health of the troops is good, considering the exposure they have unavoidably been subjected to. Fevers, however, are very prevalent. The hospital is full, and many men have been discharged on account of sickness. The troops which have been in Dawfuskie and Tybee Islands have suffered most. The Maine Eighth Regiment at one time could hardly bring one full company on parade, because of sickness in the ranks.

The colored regiment is not disbanded, and present circumstances indicate that it will not be. A company is detailed each day to work on the pier in loading and unloading vessels. They are progressing finely, and they show an aptitude for military manœuvres that one would hardly expect to see.

The weather for the past two weeks, with the exception of one or two severe showers, has been fine but very warm. Crops are looking flourishingly, corn especially. On St. Helena Island, the last week in May, I saw corn over eight feet in height.

Business at Hilton Head seems to have brightened up a little since the 1st of June. The harbor is full of trading schooners, and their owners are driving brisk bargains with those on shore.

The Quartermaster has lately erected two large storehouses. These, in addition to those already built, give the place the appearance of a thriving village. In this connection, it may be said that the Quartermaster's duties at this post are very arduous, but are discharged in a very able manner by Capt. FULLER.

Operations of the Gunboats in Stono Inlet.

STONO RIVER, S. C., May 23, 1862.

We are still at anchor in the Stono river, near Legareville, a pretty little village of planters' houses on John's Island, about three miles from the sea, and eight from Charleston. It has long been used as a Summer resort for the wealthy cotton lords of these innumerable islands, but has been deserted since December last, the residents having foolishly imagined that we would follow up the great advantage gained at Port Royal.

The fortifications already mentioned as being so numerous, we find to extend, at intervals, the entire distance to the Carolinian metropolis. A few hundred yards above this place a large fort commands an obstruction in the shape of a row of huge piles, from forty to fifty feet long, driven into and extending three-fourths of the distance across the river. The piles are planted three or four feet apart, and project from two to ten feet above the surface at high water. Were it not for a gap forty feet in width, left for their own convenience, this impediment would be of great moment; as it is, our vessels have passed and repassed without any difficulty. In this gap, which is directly in the channel five fathoms deep, they had intended sinking a monstrous bulkhead, made especially for the purpose, in such a manner as to allow the passage of their own light draft vessels, and at the same time exclude our steamers, which draw more water. This contrivance now lies about a mile further up, and, I suppose, was missed for want of the ballast necessary to sink it. The fort, which is very near this gunboat-fence, is regarded as a well-constructed earthwork, and capable of making a strong resistance. It had ample barracks, two bomular magazines, a fine cistern, parade-ground and seven heavy guns. The negroes have pointed out a number of marks, such as stakes, barrels and trees, used by the rebels to indicate the range of certain elevations and projectiles—evidently so placed in anticipation of our advent. Nearer the mouth of the river, and on its northern bank, there is a large rectangular shell fort, built for the defence of Charleston in 1812. It is now grass-grown, somewhat dilapidated, and, although a half-century old, is still serviceable. From the extent and nature of their preparations, as daily developed, I am led to believe that proper opposition would have thwarted our endeavors to enter the river, for a long time.

A large number of contrabands—over 300 in all—most of them the property of a Mr. GRIMBALL, who has a son acting as Lieutenant in the rebel army, have taken refuge on our gunboats.

We are now within two and a half miles of Charleston, which is very visible from the masthead, and are still awaiting the army, which is expected to-morrow. The Pawnee, Unadilla, Huron, Pembina, Ottawa and Ellen, also the steamer Dibb, are here.

STONO RIVER, S. C., THREE MILES FROM CHARLESTON, Monday, June 2, 1862.

During the last few days but little has been done by the fleet in this river, beyond silencing some of the enemy's smaller batteries, and preventing the erection of others, commanding points likely to be needed on the march to Charleston.

James Island, which bids fair to be the scene of many future occurrences of interest, lies between Charleston harbor and Ashley River on the north, and Stono River on the South; Folly Island River on the east, and the Stono and Wappoo Creek on the west. From its exposed position, and advantages as a means of military access to the city, it has been deemed by the rebels, and rightly too, as a place requiring much attention.

I have already mentioned the great quantity and variety of fortifications found on our first entrance to this river, and have now only to say that that was but a tithe of the actual number. Scarcely a day passes that we do not discover an additional earthwork—and so numerous are they that we have at last come to the warrantable conclusion that the island is "alive wid 'em." The negroes that come to us, shovel in hand, direct from these works, say that one line of intrenchments (part of which we can see) extends entirely across from Folly Island River to the Stono, and that near it five thousand troops are encamped. How true this latter statement is we know not; but, judging by the immense number of pickets we have seen, are rather inclined to believe it.

However, several important reconnoissances have been made by the gunboats in the direction of the city. The day following that accomplished by the Huron and Pembina, Commander DRAYTON, of the Pawnee, (brother of Gen. DRAYTON, C. S. A., and a native of South Carolina,) transferred his pennant to the Ellen, one of the ferryboat gunboats, and proceeded to draw the fire of the Wappoo forts.

This was readily done, as the pugnacious rebels fire upon the least provocation. The Ellen had scarcely opened the point of woods intervening when they banged away with two large rifled cannon from the lower battery of seven guns. The firing was good, and the range very great, some three miles, but none of the shots took effect. We cannot conceive where these rebs guns came from; they are no doubt better than any of their ordnance we have previously met with. Indeed, omitting what was stolen from the Government, one may wonder where any of the great profusion they seem to have come from. But the Ellen promptly returned the fire with her Parrott guns from the one, and from the other shelled the woods from which the rebel pickets fired on Capt. DUPONT and BERNARD the preceding day. From a Charleston paper of the 21st ult. we learn that our shots were across the Passage of Stono, struck and killed the horse of the Commander-in-Chief, who had a very narrow escape from the same fate; and another, from one of the formerly eight-pounds rifled, passed over and nearly hit a mile beyond the valley. The engagement lasted a half hour.

Several other reconnoissances made dangerous by the Ellen, although no serious damage have been made to effect the general, and are within range of the heavy battery of seven guns. Stono Creek and Stono River connects the Ashley and Stono Rivers. From the mouth of either vessels a dozen miles, carries the navigation can be seen; the steamers of two or three large ships at the wharves; several small black steamboat, resembling nearly all the southern steamers of the city, but not a single rebel flag. Emerging from on Fort Sumter, Moultrie, Johnson, Castle Pinckney and Battery, there were some 40 in sight in this region. The weather has been quite warm of late, but is now cooler, with indications of rain. Fresh provisions and supplies are plenty all around us, and the health of the fleet continues to be good.

The health of the fleet continues generally good.

STONO RIVER, June 3, 1862.

The long-expected Army has at last arrived. Yesterday afternoon, about 4, I saw a large column on the forward side-road, marching, "forward, step white" side-wheel steamers coming up the river.

It is said that the troops we have been so eagerly expecting were detained by a deficiency of transportation facilities, but this could have not have been any as a pretext, for the energetic Flag-officer, Rodgers, as soon as he heard of the difficulty, offered his disposable steamers for temporary use as transports. Some of them, I believe, were eventually accepted.

Of the advance, which arrived last night, six companies, a small battalion, stationed in Legareville, were landed on James Island, a few rods north of the "protect fence," there to await the coming of Gen. WAGNER, with cavalry, artillery, and additional infantry regiments from the Edisto. These forces are to come overland, and, as the distance is little more than twenty miles, hardly two days' march, they should get here by to-morrow at the furthest.

Major-General HUNTER is of a most determined character, unconnected by Gen. BURNSIDE, consequently the advance. His headquarters are on the steamer Delaware, and it is said he intends devoting much of his time to operations hereabouts. We hope so too.

LEGAREVILLE, Thursday, June 5, 1862.

At an early hour, this morning, the pickets of Gen. WAGNER'S Command were startled coming across John's Island, toward this village. The sight was almost as gratifying as that of the leading regiment of the transport fleet, for but a little alarm had been created by their protracted absence. Before noon the greater part of this division were in camp, and after a change to dry underclothing, and a good sleep, will be ready to assist in the contemplated movements.

The general appearance of our brave fellows here is highly satisfactory, and a strong desire for a contest with the secessionists be, causes us to anticipate glorious results.

Several severe skirmishes have already taken place, one resulting in a partial rout of the rebels. We have heard that up to this evening we have lost the services of a captain and twenty men, and captured an Adjutant-General, a number of privates and three field-pieces.

The gunboats, which are invaluable, have cleared the banks of the river for more than a mile inland, on each side of the river, and "rake" the skulking rebels whenever they appear. The Pawnee, Unadilla, Huron, Pembina, Ottawa, Ellen, E. B. Hale and Henry Andrews are now here. Commander DRAYTON is the senior officer.

The negro colony on Cole's Island is being daily increased by cable descendants from the adjoining islands. There are now nearly four hundred of them, comfortably collected here, and supported by the naval vessels.

The weather continues cool and unsettled; heavy rain squalls every few hours, retard progress, and elicit from our weather-beaten jars many compassionate remarks for the "poor volunteers."

From intelligent contrabands we learn that there were sixteen hundred infantry and artillery on James Island garrisoning the batteries, and several companies of cavalry on John's Island, that acted as scouts and pickets. Excepting the latter, all have retired toward Charleston, where they are stationed every morn to resist our advance. At Wappoo creek, five miles above our anchorage, they have a thousand negroes at work throwing up embankments, and mounting the guns removed from their outer line of defences. Gens. RIVERS and EVANS are in command. The former, however, is by no means popular, having been accused of entertaining Yankee sympathies.

The most rigid martial law is enforced in the city, no one being allowed to enter or leave without a proper military passport, and even then subjected to search. Newspapers found on passengers are immediately seized and destroyed by the officers of the guard, so fearful are they that we will learn of their weaknesses. Thanks to the exhibit curiosity and chatter of the negroes, their caution is lost, as we already possess the most important details "bout de sogo, de gun, an' de battry." The more recent news states that "the situation" there is anything but quiescent; our proximity has caused increased alarm, and those of the citizens that remain are in constant fear of an attack, retiring nightly in terror, lest the next day's sun should rise on the advancing "Hessians." In consequence of the importative demand of BEAUREGARD for reinforcements, the force there has become so much reduced that I feel confident in asserting that Charleston would, to-day, fall an easy prey to our combined forces. "We have but to reach forth to it and it is ours." Yet, I fear the Savannah force is to be relinquished.

Arrival of the Arago from Port Royal.

The United States steam-transport Arago, H. A. GARDNER Commander, from Port Royal on the evening of the 13th inst., arrived at this port, yesterday, in 67 hours.

Successful Retreat of the Rebel Forces Across the Chickahominy.

HEADQUARTERS, }
Friday Evening, June 14.

The rebels, yesterday, after driving from Old Church a squadron of the Fifth Cavalry, proceeded to Garlick's Landing, on the Pamunkey River, about four miles above the White House, where they burnt two schooners and some wagons, and drove off the mules. Their conduct is represented as barbarous, having killed several of our teamsters without any necessity. Those who failed to make their escape were taken prisoners. From here they proceeded to Tunstall's Station, four miles from White House, with a view of burning the railroad bridge. A train which was passing down at the time was fired into, killing two and wounding several. A Colonel belonging to the Excelsior Brigade was there taken prisoner, but succeeded in making his escape during the night. A Paymaster jumped from the train, and hid himself in the woods until morning, leaving $125,000 in the cars. The train never stopped, but passed on to the White House. After destroying the telegraph wire at this point, they proceeded to Baltimore Cross Roads, near New-Kent Court-house, on their way to Richmond, crossing the Chickahominy, between Bottom's Bridge and the James River, about 3 o'clock this morning. The force that accomplished this was composed of fifteen hundred cavalry and six pieces of artillery, under Gen. STUART, most of whom were residents of this locality, and therefore were no strangers to the roads. At White House, which is a rendezvous of sutlers and venders of small wares, a regular stampede took place. Lieut.-Col. IRWIN, Commandant at that post, had all the corps ordered out, and posted in favorable positions to resist any attack that might have been made. The mail boat, Island Queen, which left this morning, was crowded with hangers-on of the army and civilians who thought Fort Monroe to be a more congenial climate. At Old Church the rebels had in reserve six regiments of infantry, with artillery. As soon as the facts were known pursuit by cavalry was immediately ordered, but, the enemy having one mile of a start, only five were captured. Several arrests have been made here of citizens within our lines on suspicion of having given information to the enemy.

The Richmond papers of the 13th contain a statement that 2,000 prisoners, taken by Gen. JACKSON from Gen. BANKS, left on Wednesday for Salisbury, N. C. It also states that of the 143 of our wounded that fell into their hands at the battle of Fair Oaks, nine have since died, and the balance are in the Liberty Prison Hospital.

OUR CORRESPONDENCE FROM THE ADVANCE.

A Bold Movement of the Rebels—An Attack on our Right Wing—The Enemy Between the Chickahominy and the White House—A Force in our Rear.

THE RIGHT WING, ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, }
Friday, June 13—10 P. M. }

To-day the right wing of the army was attacked by the rebels at a point little anticipated. It has been known for several days that the enemy has been lurking about Hanover Court-house, and a small force has been detailed every day to watch his movements. It seems, however, that the rebels became emboldened by the apparent indifference with which we kept watch of that section, by not having a larger force on guard, and made a bold dash toward our pickets and rear guard, which was not wholly unsuccessful.

The portion of our force engaged was Companies B, C, F and H, of the Fifth United States Cavalry, who have been for the past ten days stationed on picket duty at the Old Church, which is situated on the main road about midway between Chickahominy Bridge and the White House.

Early this morning, Company F was sent out on a scouting expedition to the right of the Hanover road, Company B, and a part of Company H having been detailed to picket the road leading to Hanover Court-house, establishing a line not far from that place. At about 11 o'clock the rebels made their appearance and commenced an attack on our pickets, and succeeded in capturing nearly all of them.

At about the same time the scouting party also fell in with a large body of rebel cavalry, but did not venture to attack them until reinforcements should arrive, a messenger having been sent back to Old Church to get what force was remaining there.

The enemy, however, was not to be delayed in his movements, and immediately made a dash upon our scouts, forcing them to retire, but on the retreat they were met by Company F, and the remaining portion of Company H, when the combined force turned and engaged the enemy.

The rebel force was estimated to be four companies of cavalry, one of infantry, and a section of artillery.

It did not take long to ascertain that the rebel force outnumbered that of our own, and that it would be useless to attempt to break or drive them. But our gallant band was determined to do the best they could, and show the rebels that they had a good quality of metal to contend against. With this view our men, under command of Capt. ROYAL, formed in line preparatory to making a dash. At the same moment the rebels opened their pieces, discharging which, the infantry came forward, and poured out a volley of musketry. The cavalry then came on in its turn, the combined effect of the whole causing our men to fall back to Old Church. The enemy pursued them to the camp, reaching which, they burned the tents, and destroyed everything that could be inconvenient to take away with them. They also took a few score of our men prisoners. The position of our men not being secured, retreated to the Chickahominy River, but the rebels did not dare to venture to follow the pursuit.

During the engagement, Capt. BOYER, of Company C, was shot through the head, and twice through the body. They are hopeless of his recovery. Lieut. LOCKWOOD was shot through the head, and killed on the field. He also had several private men.

The rebels now hold possession of Old Church, but they will probably be driven from their position to-night, or early in the morning. WHIT.

A Skirmish with the Rebel Pickets—The Fifth Regiment Again Engaged—Enemy Driven Back by our Soldiers—A Lively Cannonade, &c.

FAIR OAKS, VA., Friday, June 13, 1862.

Yesterday morning, the New-York First Regiment of Sickles' Excelsior Brigade had quite a skirmish with the rebel pickets on our left. The rebels, by some time past, have been occupying some deserted houses in the woods in front of our outposts, from which they have annoyed our sentinels to an unmanly degree. Yesterday it was determined to "clean them out," and the duty devolving upon the above name, they pushed into them, and with a few well-directed shots and the bayonet, accomplished the task; but presenting the preparation of a large force of the enemy to surround them, retreated. The enemy again repossessed the buildings and fired them, burning everything to the ground. Five of the New-Yorkers were wounded, most of them slightly. Several of the enemy were seen to fall before their musketry.

Large sums of money are being sent home by the soldiers of this brigade this payment. The Twenty-sixth Pennsylvania regiment alone sent home $26,000, this being the first pay they have received for four months, owing to some interruption in our commissariat.

The Sixteenth Massachusetts, Col. WIGHAM, this morning arrived in camp from Norfolk, and were assigned to this brigade.

At 4½ o'clock, this morning, the rebels commenced a lively cannonading upon our working-parties on the Chickahominy, at the right, which was continued several hours without effect.

Last night the wagons and ambulances were all sent back from the front in anticipation of an attack, but, up to this time, nothing save the assault upon our fatigue-parties has been heard from the enemy. The troops of this division were kept under arms all day yesterday, but nothing occurred to call them from their camps. The enemy is closely watched night and day, and a surprise similar to that practiced upon Gen. CASEY is simply impossible.

The stereotyped complaint of insufficient food and clothing is repeated daily by rebel deserters coming within our lines.

The skeletons of the soldiers killed at the battle of Fair Oaks, in many instances, are protruding from the ground. Many were covered as they lay upon the surface, and the rain has washed the earth off, exposing either the heads, arms, feet or bodies of the victims, the flesh of which, in most instances, has been entirely decomposed. It was impossible to give them a more humane burial, in consequence of the advanced stage of decomposition in which they were found when we first occupied the field. ARGUS.

LATE NEWS FROM MEMPHIS.

A Large Rebel Army Reported to be at Grenada, Miss.—Alarm in Arkansas—Gen. Wallace Expected at Memphis—Reports from Chattanooga, &c.

MEMPHIS, Saturday, June 14.

A citizen of Memphis, who has taken the oath of allegiance, has just returned from Granada, Miss., and reports that a rebel army, 60,000 strong, has concentrated there, and that business was brisk and provisions plenty.

The following is a copy of the oath administered to the rebel officers and soldiers who voluntarily delivered themselves up to us:

"I solemnly swear that I bear true allegiance to the United States, and support and sustain the laws thereof; that I will maintain the national sovereignty paramount to that of all state, county or corporate powers; that I will discourage, discountenance and forever oppose secession, rebellion, and disintegration of the Federal Union; that I disclaim and do renounce all faith and allegiance with the so-called Confederate States and Confederate armies, and pledge my property and my life to the sacred perpetuation of this my solemn oath of allegiance to the Government of the United States of America."

There is much alarm among the whites of Crittenden County, Arkansas, opposite this city, in consequence of the discovery of a design on the part of several hundred of the negroes of that county to simultaneously run away, and present themselves to the National commander for protection. There are about 4,000 negroes in the county, and only a few hundred whites, some of whom are coming here, not deeming it safe to remain among the negroes.

A company of cavalry, the advance guard of Gen. WALLACE'S command, reached here yesterday, and Gen. WALLACE will probably arrive here to-day, and take command of the city.

The following dispatch is taken from the Memphis Grenada Appeal:

ATLANTA, Tuesday, June 10.

Passengers by the State train reported the forces of the enemy, variously estimated at from 2,000 to 7,000, had left the river opposite Chattanooga, after dividing the forces, a part going up and part down the river. It was believed they will attempt to cross and form a junction on this side, to attack the city. Gens. KIRBY SMITH, LEONIDAS PRICE and REYNOLDS are there, with plenty of troops to whip the enemy. The people of Chattanooga are firm and free from all alarm.

MEMPHIS, Sunday, June 15.

Col. BLACK's order suppressing the circulation of Confederate Treasury notes, and requiring persons to receive permits to pass the guards around the city, produced great excitement. The papers devote long editorials to the former subject. The Argus denounces the basis with which the order was issued, but it says it will ultimately call out hoarded currency, which has been idle for some months. The Avalanche trusts the order will not be modified, as it conflicts with the expressed views of Col. PRICE in his interview with the bankers of the city.

A woman dressed in man's apparel was arrested as a spy yesterday. She represents herself as having been in the Confederate service under Gen. POLK.

Seventy-four Confederate officers and soldiers took the oath on Saturday.

The following is from the Vicksburgh News of the 12th inst.:

"Gen. BRECKINRIDGE arrived yesterday.

Seven of the enemy's gunboats were engaged in shelling Grand Gulf yesterday. The result is unknown.

Gen. BUTLER had arrested Dr. SEGUI, of New-Orleans, and lodged him in Fort Jackson, with his limbs shackled and ironed.

We learn that the Confederates last week rescued the New-Orleans, Opelousas and Great Western Railroad, from the enemy, taking several officers and privates prisoners, and destroying all the bridges on the road. Two trains were then near Brashear City, and all the Federals aboard were captured. One man then ran the trains to Algiers, and cut the levee, to prevent the enemy getting out, but they soon repaired it.

Late New-Orleans papers contain the particulars of the hanging of a man named MUMFORD, condemned by the Military Commission for tearing down the American flag on the —— of April.

Six prisoners, taken at Fort Jackson, have been sentenced to be shot for violation of their parole.

The Vicksburgh Whig, of Tuesday, condemns the opinion that the city must necessarily surrender, and says, having driven back the fleet from below, they only wait an opportunity to destroy the one from above.

RICHMOND, VIEWS OF McCLELLAN'S CAMPAIGN.

From the Richmond Dispatch, June 14.

The brilliant operations of Gen. JACKSON in the Valley of the Shenandoah, crippling and disposing the forces of MILROY and SCHENCK at McDowell and BANKS at Front Royal and Winchester, of FREMONT at Cross Keys, and SHIELDS at Port Republic, have had a wide-reaching and important bearing on the war. These several corps were to have been consolidated and brought across the Blue Ridge en route for Richmond. When they reached the Rappahannock, McDOWELL, with his Fredericksburgh army, was to fall into line, and the united columns were to be precipitated on the devoted city from the north. At the same time, if is probable BURNSIDE was expected to be on hand from the south, advancing up the south side of the James from the direction of Norfolk, in conjunction with the fleet and its consorts in the river. The Capital being thus assailed from the north and south, McCLELLAN was to make the grand attack from the east, in front.

The plan was a gigantic one, and, to all probability, would have succeeded, but the unexpected reinforcements of JACKSON completely neutralized the FREMONT force, and compelling McDOWELL to detach a large portion of his army to save BANKS and Company from annihilation, and their Capital from capture. They left without consolation and succor, McDOWELL is afraid to strike. Within sound almost of the church bells of Richmond, within sight almost of the long-coveted treasure, a sudden disappointment stares him, a cold traitor salutes him, and he skulks and hides himself like a craven in the distant marshes of the Chickahominy—one day sending to Washington a braggart and mendacious bulletin of what his victorious army has done and is about to do, and the next trembling with all his might for reinforcements. For the present, at least, he is occupied by the bold dash of JACKSON—the next move should be a checkmate.

DARK PROSPECTS FOR RICHMOND.

From the Richmond Daily Examiner, June 14.

It is uncertain whether McCLELLAN'S army has fallen back to a fortified camp in the rear of his first position or further; and as the art and practice of making reconnoissance in force seems to be unknown to military men in America, and the Confederates have not gotten so far in French as to understand the use of balloons, there is probably little information worth of reliance in the possession of any person or persons in Richmond. One thing is manifest, that McCLELLAN is not attacking the Confederate lines or operating against the city. As he came here for those purposes, and as he published in all manner the intention and pledge to "push us to the wall," the fact that he is doing nothing of the sort, that he has drawn his pickets back, and acts as if only occupied about the safety of his army, proves that there is a terrible hitch or slip somewhere, and that the plan of his campaign has been interpolated with an important omission.

The fact is, that the Federal Government at this moment is in a more difficult position than it has ever been before, running greater danger than it has incurred since Manassas, and having 5 times risk that that to which the Confederacy was lately brought. It is now manifest that the Government at Washington is aware of its condition, and sees the road to Richmond, in which McCLELLAN started last Winter, via Yorktown, has been, for the present, abandoned.

McDOWELL'S co-operation was necessary to the plan, and the celerity and success of JACKSON'S movements in the Valley have compelled his recall for the defence of this city. The regular National troops have been withdrawn from both Fredericksburgh and Norfolk—their places are supplied by the militia lately summoned from the North. The 8,000 taken from Norfolk have probably joined McCLELLAN, but the whole force lately marching on Richmond from Fredericksburgh has gone to the rear of operations in the Valley.

That swift-footed Achilles, who has routed BANKS, destroyed SHIELDS, and outfoxed FREMONT, will give McDOWELL a long day's work. He may find a point in his way before he turns again toward Richmond. At any rate, the design dependent on his co-operation must be abandoned, and perhaps McCLELLAN is not less perplexed than perseveres to decide which shall be the new plan.

POOR FREMONT AND SHIELDS!

From the Richmond Whig, June 14.

Information was received from Gen. JACKSON yesterday, that FREMONT was retreating down the valley. Sic transit Fremont! He has been doing a big business for a long time as a military man, without having—till last week—fought a battle, and in that battle he was routed. Two wars several predecessors and humbugs than he and SHIELDS it would be hard to find in this war, on fruitful of such productions. They have both been used up and opposed, and will probably not appear again upon the stage while the drama lasts.

WHAT THEY THINK OF THE NORTHERN "VANDALS."

From the Richmond Daily Examiner, June 14.

Thanks to their own acts, performed already in New-Orleans, Nashville, Norfolk, Kentucky, Tennessee, the Southern people now know what subjugation means. Even if the people of the Confederate States were the worst race of cowards that ever disgraced the face of the earth, the Northern Congress has been kind enough to do for us what random cowardice a source of strength. That Congress has proscribed, before our eyes, all the engineers and engines of torture, the Abolition, the negro emancipation, the Confiscation laws, the whole machinery of judicial murder and robbery to be inflicted on the South; laws before which every man of us has forfeited his life and hereditary family of property; sentiments which reduce an entire people to the condition of hewers of wood and drawers of water for the Yankee appropriations of their land; provisions that annihilate entire States, and place the hand and all it contains, at the absolute will and mercy of wretches whose name has never, at any time, been heard, without the fear and loathing that is felt at the view of a scorpion or a snake—the Amer Jacobins, the Butlers and Scurrys.

Congress has left no doubt as to the consequences of subjugation. With present malignity and diabolical confidence, it has arranged before our eyes its racks, thumscrews, gibbets, axes, glaives. The hangmen stand at ease, full in view, waiting with folded arms the moment when the military work is ended, and the judicial business begins. The Congress of Washington has shut the door on compromise. If all the South were georgus but one only county, defended by one solitary company of infantry, it would band together and fight to the death, rather than live to endure the miserable fate prepared for those who can neither win liberty or gain an honorable death.

Passengers on the Steamer—How Tennessee Was Taken Out of the Union—Interesting Statements by Union Men—Privileges Enjoyed by the Rebels in Havana.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

HAVANA DE HAVANA, Wednesday, June 4, 1862.

Just one week ago to-day I left New-York City for New-Orleans, via Havana. Our steamer contains over fifty passengers. Among the most noticeable is a party of six feet, Tennessee, who are on their way to the "Crescent City," to look after various hogsheads of sugar, which they purchased previous to the occupation of the city by the troops. Though quite of Union sentiment, they are all quite anxious to see the "Crescent City," to look after various hogsheads of sugar, which they purchased previous to the occupation of the city by the troops. Though quite of Union sentiment, they are all quite anxious to see the folly of the rebellion even before it begins. One of these gentlemen had a hundred hogsheads of sugar in the city of Memphis when our troops took possession. Most Unionists, instead of forwarding it as directed, have piled it up on the wharf, and will, or possibly have, rolled it into the Mississippi on the approach of our gunboats. [illegible] particulars as to how Tennessee was "got out of the Union." When the secession question was first made a practical matter, the Unionists were told that if they did not approve of the resolution, they could stay at home and let the secessionists do the fighting. The next step was to call for all the arms in the possession of the Union men; of course, the disarmament of the helpless, disarmed Union man followed, they being first locked, and then forced into the secession ranks. The fact that the National Government had seized no private property, in the way mentioned the banks of Nashville, was repeatedly telegraphed to New-Orleans, and written to that city by Nashville merchants who had money in the New-Orleans banks, but it seemed to have no effect on the last named city, as its inhabitants will for years feel to their sorrow. Among the lady passengers is one who left New-Orleans in October last to meet her brother, who was a wounded soldier attached to the regiments under Gen. BLANCHARD, stationed in Norfolk and vicinity. She states that her brother was a small storekeeper in New-Orleans, a Union man, who was seized at night and hurried off to Virginia. She found her brother at Norfolk in the hospital, and nursed him till their soldiers. She was cognizant of all the excitement attending the battle between the Merrimac, Monitor, and other vessels, and states that there were two men wounded with Com. BUCHANAN, and that the Merrimac was undoubtedly in a most disabled condition, the iron strips in many places being torn up, and a shot hole through the stern. She says that the rebel troops were in a most destitute condition, many sick, and that some of the Georgia troops were seen one day in the streets of Norfolk with blankets on their shoulders for want of better clothing, and that the large contributions of soldiers' clothes and personal comforts contributed by the Southern ladies were in all instances, so far as Norfolk was concerned, charged for by the Quartermasters, nothing being contributed as gifts. Her impression was, that Norfolk and Portsmouth could have been taken at any time weeks previous to its capture by Gen. WOOL, and that she knows that the fortifications at Pig Point, Craney Island, and other rebel points, were for months past almost helpless for want of ammunition. After her many months of solicitude, her brother, though incapable of doing military duty, was, with other sick and wounded, hurried off to Richmond, the rebel officers being particularly severe upon all who are suspected of Union proclivities, and all who are impressed are marked as suspected persons.

Two other passengers, are young Englishmen doing business in Cuba. They are intelligent and rather sharp fellows, and as thoroughly posted up in secession arguments as any South Carolinian I ever met with. I wonder where they got their education. While we were running in under the famous "Moro," I was very much impressed with the general contempt displayed by the Americans on board of the steamer at "such paper walls," it being the unanimous opinion of all present, including myself, that the Monitor could demolish the Moro in an hour's work, and our gunboats after blowing out the Mississippi, could finish up Havana on their way to their honorable repose in the Brooklyn Navy-yard.

Speaking of Havana, reminds me how entirely the Secessionists have had their way in this harbor since the rebellion. While steamers and vessels under the "Stars and Stripes" have had to pay deference to all the annoying rules of the port, these rebel craft have come and gone with impunity, entering the harbor at any hour of the night, or leaving when they pleased, while a "night permit" is almost an impossibility to an honest craft. Vessels to run between here and the blockaded ports of the United States have been regularly advertised, and the business has been large, and most likely, to many concerned, profitable. All of this has done but little harm to the vast aggregate wealth and resources of the Union, but it has displeased the heart of the people of Havana, and will not soon be forgotten by the law-abiding citizens of the North, who crushed out the spirit of filibustering, in turn in due time to read not Spain but our own Republic.

While I write, the amphibious inhabitants of Havana harbor are crowding upon the boat; some are coolies, some creoles, some Spaniards, some the Lord only knows of what nationality or mixture. From the jargon of all languages, I learn that Mobile is taken, and is not true that Corinth is evacuated, and that Beauregard is reinforced; that Richmond has fallen, and is now falling out; of course, I must wait many days yet for authentic information. One thing, however, I do learn direct and truthfully, and that is that New-Orleans is quiet, more so than it has been for years; that Gen. BANKS and his troops are gaining daily in the affections of the people, and that everything in the future promises well not only for the happiness of the city, but for its speedy restoration to the Union.

In the harbor of Havana are now what were eight rebel steamers, and some ten ships and schooners. The names of the steamers, as far as I can learn them, are the Nashville, California, Cuba, Hughes, Atlantic and Black Joke, formerly the Vanderbilt. The names of the sailing vessels I could not learn. On the 27th inst., the Andromeda, Capt. J. ADAMS, was taken twelve or fourteen miles off the coast, by one of our sailing gunboats. An English steamer, name I could not learn, was also captured a few days since near the harbor; and information has been obtained of three more on their way, belonging to the same line, which it is supposed will fall into the clutches of our ocean police.

Difficulty with Rebelden—Seizure of the Privateer Orete—Arrival of Captain Barney and John E. Ward.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

NASSAU, N. P., Monday, June 9, 1862.

Since my last there has been an almost daily arrival of steamers and sailing vessels from Secessia, besides a large number of steamers and sailing vessels of a large class from England with aid and comfort for the rebels. The cargo of powder brought here by the brig Fanny Lewis, was all put on board the blockader Kate and safely landed in Charleston. The Royal Victoria Hotel is nearly filled with rebels from the South, and many from Europe on their way there. All the Northern visitors remaining here leave to-day in the British Queen, and are no doubt glad to get out of this Secession hole.

The supposed privateer Orete, which has been lying up at Cochran's Anchorage, was seized last Saturday by Commander McKINZIE, of Her Majesty's ship Bulldog, brought down and anchored in the harbor. She is pierced for guns, has a powder magazine on board, gun-trenches put down, and sundry other things, which have warranted her seizure. Still there is a report this morning that she has been released and ordered to leave the port within six days, with the privilege of taking on board what cargo they choose. Her release, in my opinion, would make her a marauder, and as a merchantman the authorities cannot order her out of the port. If she be not a merchantman, she is a privateer, and, if a privateer, why should not they act up to the Queen's proclamation, and order her to leave within twenty-four hours, or hold her as a lawful prize? It is reported and generally believed that her guns and ammunition are on board the steamer Bahama, which vessel was anchored at the same place when she was seized. She followed the Orete down into the harbor and came to anchor near her. The Orete is a fine modeled vessel and very fast.

The steamer Melita arrived here yesterday, from England, bringing [illegible] of the Sunday, and Mr. JOHN [illegible] WEBB, who was formerly United States Minister to Austria. Capt. [illegible] is a man over six feet high, with heavy sandy whiskers and moustache. He created quite an excitement at the hotel among the rebels.

A wrecking schooner arrived Saturday, from Matanzas Reef, with cargo from the Bremen brig Achilles, bound for Havana. The captain and crew had abandoned her, and probably gone to some port in Cuba in their boats. Her cargo was principally liquors. The rainy season has commenced in earnest, and gives us the prospect of a large crop of fruit.

UNION.

The President and the Radicals.

Extract from a letter addressed by Senator SUMNER to a friend in Boston:

SENATE CHAMBER, June 4, 1862.

MY DEAR SIR: Your criticism of the President is hasty. I am confident that, if you knew him as I do, you would not make it.

Of course the President cannot be held responsible for the maleficence of subordinates, unless adopted or at least tolerated by him. And I am sure that nothing of this nature or malgovernance will be tolerated, which has been adopted by him.

I am happy to let you know that he has no sympathy with BYAKLY in his absurd wickedness, closing the [illegible] in his other act of turning our camps into a hunting-ground for slaves. He repudiates both—positively. The latter point has occupied much of his thought, and the newspapers have not gone too far in recording his repeated declarations, which I have often heard from his own lips, that slaves running their way within the National lines are never to be re-enslaved. This is his conviction, expressed on every occasion.

Could you have seen the President—as I was my privilege often—while he was considering the great proclamation which he has already issued, giving freedom to emancipation in the States, emancipation in the District of Columbia, and the acknowledgment of the independence of Hayti and Liberia, even your zeal would have been satisfied, for you would have felt the sincerity of his purpose to do what he could to carry forward the principles of the Declaration of Independence. His whole soul was occupied, especially by the first proposition, which was peculiarly his own. In familiar intercourse with him, I remember nothing more touching than the earnestness and complacence with which he embraced this idea. To his mind it was just and beneficent, while it promised the sure end of Slavery. Of course, to me, who had already proposed a Bridge of Gold for the retreating foe, it was most welcome. Proceeding from the President, it must take its place among the great events of history.

If you are disposed to be impatient at any seeming shortcoming, think, I pray you, of what has been done in a brief period, and from the past discern the sure promise of the future. Knowing nothing of my convictions and of the ardor with which I maintain them, you may, perhaps, derive some assurance from my confidence. I say to you, therefore, stand by the Administration. If need be, help it by word and act, but stand by it and have faith in it.

I wish that you really knew the President, and had heard the artless expression of his convictions on those questions which concern you so deeply. You might, perhaps, wish that he were less cautious, but you would be grateful that he is so true to all that you have at heart. Believe me, therefore, you are wrong, and I regret it the more because of my desire to see all our friends stand first together.

If I write strongly, it is because I feel strongly, for my constant and intimate intercourse with the President, beginning with the 4th of March, not only binds me peculiarly to his Administration, but gives me a personal as well as a political interest in seeing that justice is done him. Believe me, my dear Sir,

With much regard, ever faithfully yours,

CHARLES SUMNER.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

AMUSEMENTS.

The last night at Wallack's was an appropriate climax to nine months of brilliantly successful management, and a well-deserved tribute to the Treasurer's personal popularity. Of all the officials having to do with the theatrical business, Mr. MOSS is acknowledged to be the unexceptionable model, whether in his relations to the player or the play-goer. He finds his account in this enviable reputation once a year at least, when he is invariably compelled to receive such a benefit as a great many more obtrusive people don't get once in a life-time. The entertainment offered on his behalf on Monday was, in our opinion, the very best that had been advertised anywhere for a twelve-month. "The Little Treasure" and "Rural Felicity" were given, and between the pieces Mr. WALLACK—the Veteran himself—delivered his annual speech, gratulatory of the past and hopeful of the time to come.

New-York knows no cessation of amusement though Miss KEENE may seek the Pennsylvanian mountains, and Mr. WALLACK retire upon his laurels and bank-book to Long Branch. Not even has there been a lapse of one night at either of the theatres called by their respective popular names. At Wallack's, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. FLORENCE commenced on Tuesday evening with a well selected company, full of first-class talent, in a new and extravagantly funny burlesque, an Irish drama, and a protean farce. With nightly variations of this kind of programme, the FLORENCES have secured their fair share of patronage and applause.

Miss MAGGIE MITCHELL is one of those bright little sympathetic actresses that somehow insinuate themselves into the affections of the public before the public has time to make up its mind on the subject of criticism. Not that she would suffer even if it were possible to exercise the critical faculty in the sternest and most ruthless kind of way. She has positive ability enough to stand the severest test of impartial analysis, and would, indeed, be rather glorified than otherwise by the result. But there is a charming freshness and originality about her that forestalls without defying criticism, and that makes you feel at once she is not to be carped and cavilled at, but to be studied and appreciatively understood. Her Fanchon (in the drama of that name which she is now playing at Laura Keene's) is a performance of so much intelligence of conception and of such exquisite neatness in execution, as to put fault-finding out of the question; one can only find for it the heartiest admiration and most unqualified eulogy. Mr. J. W. COLLINS and Mr. A. H. DAVENPORT, who, by the way, makes a most excellent stage-manager, are also good in their respective parts.

At Niblo's, Miss CAROLINE RICHINGS continues to delight large and fashionable audiences with her magnificent singing in "The Siren." She is supported in the melo-dramatic portions of the piece by Mr. E. L. DAVENPORT, Mr. JOHN GILBERT, Mr. PETER RICHINGS, Mr. SKERWIL and Mrs. MARDER. Last evening, Miss RICHINGS appeared for the first time here in the Druid scene from "Norma," introducing the celebrated "Casta Diva," which she rendered with very fine effect. To-night and to-morrow it will be repeated.

On Thursday evening Miss BATEMAN appeared as Julia in "The Hunchback", at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. We have heretofore spoken of her personation of the character in terms of the highest commendation. Additional interest was on the occasion given to the performance by the delightful manner in which Miss MADELINE HENSHAW played Helen. It was the nearest approach to what may be considered perfection in the part that we have seen for a long while. Last night Miss BATEMAN, on invitation of several of the leading members of the community in the City of Churches, appeared as Geraldine in her mother's tragedy of that name. She was supported by Mr. H. L. BATEMAN, Mr. J. W. WALLACK, Jr., and other well-known actors of ability. It is a pity that the residents of our sister city cannot have an opportunity of seeing her in her whole round of characters; but this is impossible, as the Academy is engaged for other purposes, so they must be satisfied with what they can get, and be thankful. To-night another performance is given.

One of the most enjoyable places in the City to visit on a Summer's evening, is NIBLO'S Cremorne Garden, corner of Sixth-avenue and Fourteenth-street. Pleasant and green are the arbors, excellent the entertainments, dazzlingly illuminated the grounds, gay and fashionable the visitors, and in all respects the place is as pleasant a retreat as is to be found in a warm and dusty city. Mr. THOMAS BAKER, the well-known leader of Laura Keene's Theatre commences the performances with a promenade concert by a band of forty musicians; then follows vocal music, CARLOTTA PATTI, Madame BENEDICT, Signori SBOLGIA and ARDAVANI, being the principal singers; then that bewitching danseuse, the "beautiful" CUBAS, assisted by a powerful corps de ballet, execute some of the most ravishing Spanish dances. And, as though this were not enough amusement for one evening, the whole concludes with an equestrian exhibition, in which Madame TOURNAIRE appears with her superb steed of horses. Too much praise cannot be given to Mr. NIXON for the excellent manner in which his new enterprise is conducted. Polite and attentive ushers attend upon you, and everything is done to make things agreeable to the visitor.

Prof. ANDERSON, at the Winter Garden, is still running, with decided success, Mr. CHARLES GAYLER's burlesque of "The Winter's Tempest," and, judging from the past week, will continue to do so. Considerable outlay has been made, the entertainment now closing at 10½ o'clock. Miss EMILY THORNE, since her first appearance, on Monday night, has been steadily gaining ground in the affections of her audiences, and has achieved a success of which she may well be proud. The principal shares of Miss THORNE's triumph to Miss IDA BURNS, a young actress, who, if she continues to take as much pains as she has hitherto done, will soon be one of the leading burlesque actresses in this country.

Theatrical entertainments are again in the ascendant at BARNUM'S. This afternoon and evening MARK LEMON's drama of "Gwynneth Vaughn," will be revived, followed by the farce of "A trip to Richmond," in the performance of which, Mrs. PATON, Miss JENNIE WATTS, Mr. HADAWAY, Mr. BENEDICT, and the whole strength of Mr. BARNUM's company are included. Commodore NUTT continues to hold his daily levees; Master WALLACE, the infant orator, has been disengaged, and the curiosities—not forgetting the aquarial garden, the monster serpents, and the happy family—are all the time on exhibition.

Mr. Manager FOX, at the Old Bowery Theatre, has revived the palmy days of this establishment, it being crowded nightly. Three most popular pieces will be given this evening. To-morrow night, being the anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill, a patriotic bill will be presented.

Miss ADA ISAACS MENKEN has been playing the past week, to well-filled houses, at the New Bowery. "Mazeppa" will be performed this evening, Miss MENKEN playing the hero, doing all sorts of impossible things lashed to the back of her "wild steed" of the desert. "An Object of Interest" is also on the bills.

Board of Aldermen.

VETOES FROM THE MAYOR—COMPLIMENT TO SECRETARY SEWARD AND TO ARCHBISHOP HUGHES—NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING.

The Aldermen met yesterday for the first time in several weeks in the regular chamber of the Board, which has been undergoing repairs, and is now completed in the most elegant and tasteful manner.

A message was received from the Mayor vetoing the resolution of the Board making the Staats Zeitung a Corporation paper; also, a message vetoing a resolution authorizing the Clerk to furnish members with badges, batons, books, maps, &c. Both vetoes may be found in the official report. The former was ordered printed and the latter was overruled by a two-thirds vote.

The resolutions of the Councilmen tendering the thanks of the Common Council, and through them of the citizens of New-York, to Archbishop HUGHES, for his services abroad in behalf of the country, were concurred in.

The Councilmen's resolutions, complimentary to Secretary SEWARD, coming up for concurrence, Alderman DAYTON objected, saying that he was not aware of the fact, as stated in the preamble to the resolutions, that Mr. SEWARD had renounced all claims to the highest office in the gift of the people, and he was not disposed to take advantage of any casual remark that might have fallen from that gentleman, to parade it publicly as a formal declination of the Presidency, in case the people should see fit to nominate him for that office.

Alderman GERRY moved to strike out that part of the preamble referred to, which was agreed to, and the resolutions, as amended, were unanimously concurred in.

The Mayor's veto of the resolutions complimentary to THURLOW WEED and tendering him a public reception, was overruled by a vote of 13 to 3—Alderman GERRY, the mover of the resolutions objecting to their passage over the veto on the ground that Mr. WEED had declined the proposed reception, and the only object to be gained by their passage would be to "spit (figuratively speaking) in the face of the Mayor."

A bill of the New-York Leader for advertising, to the amount of $150, under the administration of Chief Engineer HENRY HOWARD, coming up, Alderman GERRY opposed it and characterized it as a fraudulent bill; it was not just, it should have been presented before this late day. For one, he had too much pride and self-respect to vote for the payment of unjust bills to a paper that constantly proclaimed the Common Council to be a band of thieves and robbers.

Alderman DAYTON also opposed the payment of the bill, and moved to recommit it for a fuller report of the facts in relation to the manner in which the bill was incurred.

Alderman FROMME said that it seemed to him that outside considerations entered into the consideration of this bill, as they too often did in relation to matters coming before the Board. At the beginning of the year, the Mayor sent in a message in which he discountenanced all further increase in the advertising expenses of the City, and he (Alderman FROMME) congratulated himself that he would henceforth have an ally in the Mayor, in the course he had uniformly pursued in relation to the subject. But he found, to his great disappointment, that the Mayor signed, without hesitation, a resolution making a certain paper a Corporation paper, when it happened to belong to his own party.

Alderman DAYTON (interrupting the speaker) denied that the paper alluded to—the NEW-YORK TIMES—belonged in any way to the same party with the Mayor.

Alderman OTTIWELL said that it "Did belong to the same party, and he would back up the argument of Alderman FROMME."

Alderman FROMME, resuming, said he did not think the editor of the Leader was a man who would present an unjust bill to this Board for payment, and he had no doubt the bill was fairly incurred, but this, like many other bills of like character presented to the Common Council for payment, only showed the necessity of having some general system of advertising, instead of allowing the business to be conducted in the loose way it had heretofore been.

After some further discussion, the motion to recommit was lost, and the Board concurred with the Councilmen for the payment of the bill.

The Board then adjourned to Thursday next at 1 o'clock.

Board of Councilmen.

REMOVAL OF RAILS ON CENTRE-STREET AND FOURTH-AVENUE.

The Board of Councilmen held their regular meeting yesterday, but the entire time was occupied with discussions upon unimportant matters. A report, in favor of compelling the Harlem Railroad Company to remove the T rails from Centre, Broome and Grand streets, and from the Fourth-avenue, and substituting the grooved rail, caused a great deal of discussion, but was finally adopted. Nearly an hour was consumed in the discussion of a resolution permitting the erection of a stand on the sidewalk adjacent to the Post-office, for the sale of prints and papers; and the entire session, with the exception of these two matters, was devoted to routine and unimportant business.

Quaker Meeting at the Tombs.

VISIT OF ELIZABETH COMSTOCK AND COMPANY, OF MICHIGAN, TO THE PRISONERS—SCENE IN THE CONDEMNED CELL.

A solemn and instructive occasion was enjoyed on Sunday morning by the inmates of the City Prison. By appointment with the Chaplain, Rev. Mr. CARP, some ministering Friends, who are deeply interested in visiting our model benevolent and correctional Institutions, occupied the time usually devoted to Church service. ELIZABETH COMSTOCK, PERRY R. HATHAWAY, GRACE and HENRY DUKENSON, each made brief and truly impressive remarks; but the main interest of the occasion centered in the visit of these Friends to the cell of WILLIAM HENRY HAWKINS, who is condemned to be hung on the 27th of the present month. As the keeper opened the inner door of the cell and announced to the colored occupant the request of the Friends to sit with him a little while, he arose from his pallet, and, in lieu of chairs, invited them to be seated thereon. Chairs were soon supplied by the keeper, who had perceived the lack, and who, in consideration of the close atmosphere, expressed a willingness to permit his prisoner to leave his cell for the corridor during their stay. The prisoner appeared to have no choice in the matter, and bore himself with quiet dignity, remaining standing by his pallet while the others sat. First, HENRY DUKENSON addressed him in language calculated to prepare his mind for the more moving appeals that were to be made in his behalf by the sympathetic soul of woman. An unbroken silence followed the brief address, when, after some moments, the eloquent expressions of ELIZABETH COMSTOCK, given in a voice deeply subdued, filled the narrow cell with tones which must have penetrated to the hidden recesses of conscience in the heart of its occupant, whom she denominated "our poor brother." Her words carried also healing on their wings, for she believes that the encouraging promises which are held out even at the "eleventh hour," Another silence ensued, sufficiently long to allow the words spoken, to lay hold upon the mind of the criminal, who made no outward demonstrations of feeling but maintained a modestly respectful and attentive demeanor.

Just before the little circle broke up GRACE DUKENSON knelt beside the convict's bed, and in a voice of thrilling sweetness supplicated Divine mercy for his brief career upon earth, and for his perfect acceptance of the joys of the redeemed hereafter. These words of prayer breathed full of hope, and must have lifted any weight of despair. As the Friends were about leaving, FRANK HATHAWAY gave what she felt to be her message of consolation to the condemned, and reading matter was left with him in order to keep up the good impressions made. He was requested to speak freely to the Friends, as they desired to be of use to him, even in a temporal sense, but he either thought it impracticable, or refrained through motives of delicacy, from charging them with any commission. He is very fond of reading, and has exhausted his very limited library, which consists mainly of three Bibles and two or three religious works. He seemed to regret not being able to hear distinctly, in consequence of the location of his cell, the words of ministers who came to visit the prison. The speaker's position is upon the crossing of the second corridor, or tier; and, as the sound naturally ascends, those below are less favored than they upon the upper tiers. It is a singular sight to the uninitiated this addressing an invisible audience, for as the prisoners are not allowed to leave their cells, the only intimation a speaker receives of the presence of auditors is the appearance of a hand clutched now and then around the slats of the grated doors, or sometimes an uncombed and unwashed head is visible, with face pressing closely against the unyielding iron, to get a peep of the earthly vessel whence emanates such inspiring words of cheer; again is to be seen light, graceful waves of smoke, curling forth from the interstices, evincing an inadequate regard for religious observances, and an inordinate love for a mild cigar, upon the part of the incarcerated individual.

Rev. Mr. Beecher on City Railways.

On Sunday morning Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER lectured his people upon the sin of covetousness, under which general head he included certain sins of shopping, picture-buying, house-building, and so on, reserving an especial rap for the benefit of the city railway companies, who, in addition to whatever individual rapacity they may possess, are open to a very serious charge in regard to the treatment of drivers and conductors.

To all intent, Mr. BEECHER spoke thus:

"And in this connection I must say a word for a much-abused class in our midst, who are made the objects of treatment nearly allied to the sin of which I am speaking. I refer to the car-drivers and conductors on our city railways. These men—mainly men of family—are hard-worked fourteen hours a day, with no rest on the Sabbath, and with no holiday whatever. They have no opportunity to see or be with their families, much less to educate or cultivate them; and it is a fact, that one of these drivers, employed for a series of years, may have children grown up to be marriageable men and women, without ever seeing them, except when abed and asleep.

These things are not in Timbuctoo or the Sandwich Islands, but here in Fulton-street. They are the men whom you saw as you came to church, whom you will see when you go home. They brought you here; they bring loads of people to this church every Sunday, and it is a disgrace to a Christian community that such things are allowable.

The Directors say: "Well, our first duty is to the stockholders; we must declare large dividends." I beg your pardon. Your first duty is toward God's stock; and when it is a question as to which stock is to rule highest, His must be preferred.

Now, then, you—many of you—are stockholders in these roads. Go up, and say to your representatives, "We will be content with one per cent. less dividend, and will consent that greater liberality be shown our employes." That would settle the whole matter, for it's you stockholders of whom the Directors are afraid. The Ferry Company does better than this; its men have the whole of every other Sunday, and the half of every one. Let some such system as this, or a better one, be adopted, and let us give these men—men for whom Christ died—at least a chance to see and know their children, to breathe fresh air, and if they wish it, to hear the Word of God on His holy day.

GENERAL CITY NEWS.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION OF COLUMBIA COLLEGE.—The first annual sermon before this Association was delivered at the Church of the Ascension, in Fifth-avenue, on Sunday evening, by Rev. ALEX. H. VINTON, D. D., who took for his text the following, from the First Epistle of John: "I have written unto you, young men, because ye are strong." The aim of the discourse was to point out how the strength of young manhood could be so employed and directed as to secure the happiness of the individual, and confer the greatest blessings upon the world. Youth was the period of the passions—pride, self-will, the lust of the flesh and the lust of the eye—and according as those passions obtained the mastery or were kept in subjection, would the individual become a driveling slave or a rational man. Some compensating power was needed to control the energies and passions of youth, and turn them to good. That compensating power was conscience, and hence the need of constant enlightenment of conscience. This enlightenment came not from within, but from without—it came from above—it was revelation. The peculiar influences that surrounded young men in this country, where everything is precocious, where the child is the man, where the tendencies are to encourage rather than to check the pride and self-will of young manhood, where the spirit of independence is instilled into the individual from childhood, made it especially necessary that the compensating power of conscience should receive a full development and enlightenment. In political life, above all, was there a need of this power. Every American was born a politician, and every aspiring politician has his conscience—one for himself and one for his party—which, being mutually destructive of each other, were equivalent to no conscience at all. Political ambition, without the compensating power of conscience, tempted a man to huckster away his country's liberties and union, for his own advancement. Our politicians had need to learn that "God reileth: let the nations tremble." They must learn that a nation, no more than an individual, could disregard moral law with impunity. The indispensable necessity of an enlightened conscience, as a guide and restraint to the individual in all the avocations of life, was forcibly urged by argument and illustration, and the speaker closed his discourse by picturing to the minds of his hearers the serious stages in life's journey, and peaceful death, of a man whose career had been guided by an enlightened conscience and the precepts of Christianity.

CASE OF MRS. REAL.—Our reporter saw Mrs. REAL at the Tombs yesterday morning. Although naturally laboring under the greatest mental excitement, she appeared externally calm and tranquil. She is advisely reserved concerning the deed for which she is committed, but says unhesitatingly, that had she known who the lady was with whom her husband was walking, she would not have separated them or addressed her. EDWIN JAMES, Esq., has kindly volunteered his professional services, and under advice of Capt. PETIT, who takes the deepest interest in her case, Mrs. REAL has accepted them. Very many people of position and influence have called upon her since her confinement, and all tender advice, aid and comfort. She is very desirous that an early trial may be granted her, feeling confident that an acquittal will certainly be its issue.

ARREST OF AN ALLEGED FORGER.—GEORGE HOWES, a man about 65 years of age, was taken into custody yesterday on a bench warrant, issued by Justice BARNUM, upon an indictment of the Grand Jury, by which he is accused of forging a check on the Butchers' and Drovers' Bank of this City, for the sum of $256. He was immediately committed in default of bail. The prisoner has already served two terms in the State Prison at Sing Sing. The last offence for which he was imprisoned was for a forgery committed upon Ex-Recorder FRANCIS TILLOU. A man named FINNEGAN was arrested at the same time, upon a charge of having been a copartner in the commission of the crime. In order to exonerate himself he implicated HOWES, and it is believed that the former will testify against him on the trial.

HAWKINS, THE CONDEMNED.—Mr. HAWKINS, the colored steward who killed his Captain at midnight in his cabin, will be hung on Friday, the 27th inst. HAWKINS is in a comfortable bodily condition, and seems undisturbed mentally by the awful circumstances surrounding him. He is daily attended by Rev. Mr. CARP, who ministers to him in holy things. HAWKINS admits that he deserves fully his fate, and says, that having broken the law, he must, of course, submit with resignation to its judgment. There have been strenuous exertions on the part of many persons to obtain a commutation of his punishment, but with no favorable result. He will, without doubt, suffer the penalty on Friday, as announced.

MEETING OF THE COMMISSIONERS TO AUDIT MILITARY CLAIMS.—The Commissioners appointed to audit claims arising out of the organization, equipment and subsistence of troops raised in this State for the United States service, held their first meeting yesterday, at No. 51 Walker-street. Inspector-General ARTHUR, Judge-Advocate WM. H. ANTHON and Quartermaster VAN VECHTEN, compose the Commission. No business of importance was transacted yesterday, but the Commission will meet again to-day, and continue their sittings until the middle of July, when they will adjourn to Albany. At their session in this City, the Commissioners will finally audit the claims of persons residing east and south of Albany.

NEW PICTURES.—COMPANY MAYNE, whose studio is at [illegible], Broadway, has placed on exhibition a portrait of a prominent sugar merchant of this City, which will rank deservedly high among pictures of its class. The head is one of uncommon power, and the drapery is beyond question an absolute photograph of reality. Mr. MAYNE is painting a portrait of Miss HERNANDEZ, the young actress whose pretty face is turning the head of all Young New-York. It is a capital likeness and is remarkable for its grace of pose and truthfulness of expression. The former will be at GOURIE's to-day, the latter at SOMMER's next week.

APPEAL TO THE BENEVOLENT.—A soldier, who lost one of his limbs in the battle of Bull Run, who has a family of wife and five small children, appeals to the public, for means to procure an artificial limb, and a little over, to assist him into a small business, to keep his family from starvation. Donations can be sent by mail, or otherwise, to Mr. HAYNOR, to the care of NATHAN NEWBY, Esq., Nos. 79 Nassau-st., New-York. Mr. NEWBY can vouch for the truth and circumstances of the above appeal. All receipts will be acknowledged.

CHARGED WITH PERJURY.—FRANCIS FLANNERY was arrested yesterday upon the complaint of JOHN H. TALLMAN, who alleges that FLANNERY committed the crime of perjury, while giving evidence on the trial of a cause, in which he, FLANNERY, was plaintiff, and TALLMAN was defendant. Once previously took the accused into custody and Justice KEENAN held him to bail in the sum of $600. Mr. TALLMAN alleges that by the false statement of the prisoner he lost the sum of $222.

RETURN OF THE REBEL PRIVATEERSMEN.—The 93 rebel privateersmen, who were sent to Fort Monroe to be exchanged for Col. CONCORAN, returned to this City on Saturday, and were committed to Fort Lafayette. Jeff. DAVIS' Government having refused to initiate the agreement for their exchange. They are all rabid secessionists, and, it will be recollected, formed a plot for capturing the steamer which took them out under a flag of truce to be exchanged, which was fortunately discovered in time to be thwarted.

WATCHERS WANTED FOR SICK AND WOUNDED SOLDIERS.—There is need of more watchers for the sick and wounded soldiers in the hospitals in this City, and persons who are willing to aid the poor sufferers by devoting an occasional night to their service, are requested to send their address to JAMES L. SCHAFER, Chairman of the Young Men's Christian Association, No. 186 Broadway.

REOPENING OF FINE ART GALLERY.—The National Academy of Design closes its Annual Exhibition on the 23d inst., the galleries will then be closed until July 2, when they will be opened with a collection of purely American works for the first time.

SUPREME COURT—CIRCUIT.

Jules Lefargue vs. Louis Beaver.—The plaintiff sued upon four bills of exchange, drawn by defendant in favor of plaintiff, on L. Zeffero, & Co., Havre, France. The United States Consul at that port certified to the protest of the same for non-acceptance and non-payment. The plaintiff claimed that such evidence was taken in pursuance of the French law, and that such mode of protest for non-acceptance and non-payment was proper in the premises.

Upon this state of facts the Court refused to grant a nonsuit, and ordered a verdict for the plaintiff, upon which a verdict was entered in favor of the plaintiff for the sum of $1,[illegible]. J. H. Ketcham, for plaintiff; Comfort Brothers for defendant.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

We have further rebel reports of the preliminary operations of our forces against Charleston. A dispatch from Augusta, Ga., dated the 12th, informs us that a sharp engagement took place on James Island, on Tuesday afternoon, which continued until dark, the occasion being an attack on our forces, to prevent them from occupying a certain piece of woods. The rebels put down their loss at from fifty to sixty men, principally Georgians, among whom is Col. WILLIAMS, of the Forty-sixth Georgia Regiment, mortally wounded.

Our correspondence from Port Royal, received yesterday, gives important details of the operations preceding the affair noted above, and of which we have had previous accounts through rebel channels. It will be seen that our movements in the direction of Charleston are gradual, but sure, and that in all the skirmishes which the rebels claim to have been successful in, our forces have gained decided advantages. One of our correspondents expresses the belief that the capture of Charleston will soon be a matter of history, though there is no doubt that the capture will be effected only after hard fighting.

We have this morning some particulars of the demonstration made by a force of rebels on Friday last against the right wing of Gen. MCCLELLAN'S army. It appears that after driving a force of our cavalry from Old Church, as already mentioned, the rebels proceeded to Garlick's Landing on the Pamunkey River, where they committed some depredations, and subsequently went to Tunstall's Station, four miles from White House, with a view to burning the railroad bridge. They didnot succeed in this, however, and soon after scuffled across the Chickahominy, between Bottom's Bridge and the James River. An attempt was made at pursuit, but too late.

A letter from Gen. MCCLELLAN was received in Philadelphia, on Saturday, by a gentleman high in authority. In it the rebel loss at Fair Oaks was stated to be ten thousand. Through reliable sources of information, Gen. MCCLELLAN had learned that the wounded in Richmond now number seven thousand. Almost every house has its quota.

A battle took place in the Indian Territory on the 6th inst., in which the rebel forces were defeated, with the loss of all their camp equipage, &c., together with a large number of beef cattle, mules and horses.

Surgeon HAYS, of Pennsylvania, who accompanied a number of our wounded soldiers from the Valley of the Shenandoah to Washington, where they arrived on Saturday, has been dismissed from the service by Secretary STANTON, for neglecting them.

Deserters state that the rebels have built three new batteries below Drury's Bluff on Chapin's Bluff. Two of them are iron batteries, and the other a submarine battery. The latter consists of four tanks of boiler iron, each holding twenty-five hundred pounds of powder, strung across the channel, one connected with the other, and a wire running through them, properly encased and leading up the bank, where an operator is stationed to explode them. They have put this battery a short distance below Chapin's Bluff.

The Washington Star, of Saturday, has this paragraph: "The utterly false pretence of the Dutch General at New-Orleans, that the money taken from his custody by order of Maj.-Gen. BUTLER ($800,000) was not the proceeds of the secesh robbery of the United States mint, but Mexican dollars really belonging to Horn & Co., of Amsterdam, has been fairly exposed by microscopic examination of the coin itself, which shows underneath the impression of the Mexican die, perfect evidence that it was originally United States coin. It was retoucned (in New-Orleans) in order to prevent detection in case it should fall again within reach of Uncle Sam's clutches. The O, the distinctive mark of the United States dollar coinage by the New-Orleans mint, still remains visible, with the microscope upon each of the adulterated $800,000."

Skirmishing parties from the Eleventh Virginia Regiment, went into Boone County, a few days since, did good service in scattering guerrillas. One party killed eleven, including the notorious guerrilla leader, Capt. DOWNS.

The steam-transport Arago arrived at this port yesterday, from Port Royal, having on board 261 bales of Sea Island cotton, consigned to Collector MAGOON. She also brought a number of the prisoners captured at Fort Pulaski.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate yesterday petitions were presented for the enlargement of the Erie and Owego Canals, and for a Bankrupt law. The Naval Appropriation bill was taken up at 1 o'clock, and debated at considerable length. An amendment, proposed by Mr. WILSON, of Massachusetts, providing that slaves shall not be employed in the Navy-yards, was rejected—18 to 17. With regard to the location of the Naval Academy, a Commission was provided for to settle the matter, the appropriation of $25,000 for repairs at Annapolis being striked out, and the debate consequently resumed the preparation for a Constitution, Utah was admitted permanently, ceding the location of Annapolis. The bill was then passed. A long discussion occurred in regard to the hour of daily meeting, in which the propriety of an early adjournment was considered. It was finally resolved that on and after the 16th of June the Senate will meet at 11 o'clock.

In the House, an adverse report was made by the Committee on Elections, on the petition of CHARLES THOMAS PORTER, asking admission to a seat as representative from the Second District of North Carolina. Mr. McPHERSON, of Pennsylvania, introduced a resolution providing for a grade of Lieutenant-General in the army, to be conferred at the end of the war upon the General most deserving of it. The Committee on the War was instructed to inquire into the treatment of our soldiers wounded at the battle of Port Republic. A resolution of inquiry into the relative treatment of our soldiers and rebel prisoners at Port Royal was introduced and adopted. The Secretary of War was requested, by resolution, to inform the House by whose order the White House, owned by a son of the rebel Gen. LEE, is guarded by our soldiers, and withheld from hospital purposes. A resolution was also adopted inquiring whether it is true that Gen. BANKS, in his late retreat, burned Government transportation for negroes, to the exclusion and neglect of our wounded soldiers. The Senate bill, reorganizing the Navy Department, was passed, with amendments. Saturday next was set aside for the consideration of a bill to secure the early distribution of prize money. The House then adjourned.

GENERAL NEWS.

The steamship Ariel, from Aspinwall on the 5th inst., arrived at this port yesterday, with the mails, passengers and treasure from California. She brings intelligence of the wreck of the British screw steamer Matine at the entrance of the harbor of Navidad, near Manzanilla, on the coast of Mexico. She had on board about $1,500,000 in treasure, which, with her guns, would be saved by the Clio, which vessel had gone up to her assistance from Acapulco. No lives were lost. The Matine was bound into the little port of Navidad for the purpose of smuggling off silver. There is little news of consequence from the United States of Colombia, but what little there is indicates that the country is about as far from peace as ever. An official bulletin, issued at Bogota, on the 16th of April, states that in Guasco, State of Cundenamarca, there was a fight on the 14th, between the Liberals and Conservatives, the latter losing two hundred prisoners. The Liberals claim the victory. It is expected that there will be trouble in Panama relative to the Guardia-Murrillo Treaty, entered into some time ago between the Governor of the State and the agent of the Mosquera Government. There is no news from Central America, and from South America the intelligence is not important. Full details will be found in the letter of our correspondent.

The United States steamer Massachusetts, which arrived at Philadelphia on Saturday, has on board the crew of the prize vessel Nassau, formerly the Gordon, loaded with arms and ammunition for the rebels, captured by the steamers State of Georgia and Victoria off Old Inlet, Wilmington, N. C., and the schooner Rosena, captured at Stono Inlet, S. C. The steamer brought as a passenger, Dr. WHITFIELD, of Philadelphia, who escaped in a small skiff from the rebels on the Indian River, Fla., to avoid conscription. A few nights before the Massachusetts sailed, five deserters, artillerymen, came out from Fort Moultrie, and gave themselves up to Capt. UPSHUR, of the Flambeau. They report a bad state of things in Charleston, between the scarcity of provisions and the fear of the appearance of Gen. HUNTER.

The body of the wife Rev. T. DE WITT TALMAGE, who was drowned by the upsetting of a row-boat, at Fairmount, on June 9, was found early Sunday morning, at Race-street wharf, Schuylkill. During the past week every effort was made to recover the body, even to the discharge of cannons over the surface of the water.

The New Ironsides has been taken off the dock at the Philadelphia Navy-yard, and removed to the Read-street pier, where the rest of the plates will be put upon her. But one month remains in which to complete her according to the terms of the contract, and a large force will be required to accomplish it. She will receive her armament at the Navy-yard, where her gun-carriages are being made.

The Board of Aldermen yesterday overruled two vetoes of the Mayor by a two-thirds vote—one relative to tendering a public reception to THURLOW WEED, and the other authorizing the Clerk to furnish badges, &c., for the members of the Board. The resolutions of the Councilmen complimentary to Secretary SEWARD and to Archbishop HUGHES, were concurred in.

The Stock market left off steady yesterday afternoon, at about the prices of Saturday. The Gold and Exchange rates were less excited, though still firm at 30¼ for Gold, and 111½ on London.

Heavy receipts depressed the market for Flour, yesterday, and prices declined 5c. ⅌ bbl., yet business was restricted. Wheat and Corn were less abundant, and were dearer, with a fair inquiry, especially from shippers, for sound lots. Cotton was quiet, but steady, as were also Oils, Fish, Whalebone, Metals and Tobacco. A moderate demand prevailed for Hay, Hops, Rice, Pepper, Tallow and Provisions. Sugars, Coffee and Whisky were more sought after—the latter article at advanced prices. The freight market was inactive, and rates were depressed.

The cattle markets are again largely overstocked. More than 4,000 bullocks have been received at Forty-fourth-street since the last general market, when there were too many cattle. Prices have declined ½c. ⅌ lb., and the stock will scarcely be sold during to-day. Sheep are scarce and very high.

DANGERS DISAPPEARING.—Prior to the occupation of New-Orleans, the rebels there threatened that if our troops ever did get to the city, they would find a ghastly enemy with whom it would be hard work to cope—that Yellow Jack was ready to devour us. He had already been seen around the purlieus of the city, and was only waiting for the arrival of Northmen to gorge his maw with Yankee blood. But now the local newspapers are compelled to record the fact that our soldiers are extremely healthy, that Yellow Jack cannot be discovered, and that "there has probably never been a similar body of men in any locality so free from disease." It looks now as if Yellow Jack would not occupy New-Orleans until our men are ready to evacuate it.

The Memphis papers, among a swarm of other horrors, threatened that the rebels of that town would poison their cisterns and put their enemies upon river water, and that in less than a week our troops "would have small alligators crawling through them." Our troops have been in possession of the place now something like ten days, and we have not yet heard of an instance of the sort. If such a thing should occur, we hope that, for the sake of science, the Avalanche will record it and give us all the details.

In Florida, our troops were to be devoured, body and bones, by huge gallinippers; in Alabama and Mississippi, they would be struck at by copper-head snakes, set upon by lizards and all sorts of saurian reptiles, while they would have to wade neck-deep, and sleep, in swamps which were a living mass of poisonous vermin; in Louisiana, they would not only find alligators inside of them, but outside also—in their beds, in their boots, and at their breakfast-tables—alligators, alligators everywhere—and alligator steaks to breakfast; in Arkansas, our troops were to be "chawed up" by the enlightened cannibals of that State; in South Carolina, and particularly in that part of the State now actually occupied by us—what a host of horrors was conjured up, all independent of the Firebrand themselves. The sea there was so hot it would roast Northerners to cinders; the snow was so malignant she would turn them all into lunatics; while three or four new varieties of fever, each more deadly than the other, were generated on the coast every day; and if our troops should ever enter Charleston, the buzzards of that buzzard-ridden city would sit upon them for carrion. In face of all these horrors, not to mention the rebel army, our soldiers have actually entered each of these States, and have occupied and possessed a large share of some of them. But, somehow or other, the difficulties seem to recede as we advance. It cannot be doubted that the Southern writers truly described their own section. If they did so, all the snakes, humanity, gallinippers, swamps, reptiles, vermin, &c., have probably retreated in the wake of their allies and conquerors, the rebel troops.

Intervention—The Position of France and England.

A malicious sifting of the public and private advices received from Europe during ten days past, presents in an unpleasant light, the possibility of European intervention in the American question. So obstinately is the progress of the National arms ignored, and the value of National victories disputed; so steadily, in spite of evidence plain as sunlight, is the opinion of the irrepressibility of the South adhered to; so captiously is the entire military, civil and financial policy of the North discussed, as to render it plain, beyond demonstration, that France and England are busily arguing themselves into a meddlesome, and even belligerent temper toward the American Government. And this is not the impulse, as we very well know, of mere unfriendly propensities. The British and the French people have been severe sufferers because of the American war. Every day of its prolongation has added a new pang to the existence of the laboring classes, and a new peril to the existence of government and civil order; until it has become a question of capital moment, whether or not it is incumbent upon Europe to perish passively in deference to a vague and perhaps Quixotic principle of international law. The discussion of this thesis has recently, more urgently than ever before, engaged the attention of the French and British Cabinets. And the impression conveyed by the sources of information to which we have referred, tends strongly to encourage the conviction that interference, looking to the pacification of our difficulties, has been favorably considered by both Governments, and might at any moment have been propounded. And if the homeward mission of Lord Lyons have any diplomatic significance, it may not be extravagant to accept the popular interpretation, which ascribes it to the friendly desire of his Lordship to prevent any precipitate action of his Government upon the subject.

Intervention may be offered in a variety of ways, which will have this only in common, that they act morally in favor of the rebellion. It is more than probable that the earliest form it will assume, if it ever present itself, will be the courteous tender of mediation founded on conditions consistent, so far as they go, with the emancipation policy of the President, but in all probability quite irreconcilable with that sine qua non of the American policy—the entire submission of the South to the Constitution. It is also conceivable that a more peremptory invitation to peace has been contemplated, the rejection of which was to be the signal of active assistance dispatched to building up of the weaker, and even now, beaten party.

But whatever the form in which the subject has embodied itself in the minds of European statesmen, there is reason to think events have occurred within the last fortnight which will give a new direction to their political views, and, in fact, suggest the impropriety of selecting the present moment for the exhibition of any hostile purpose toward this country. Of those events, the virtual suppression of the rebellion in the Valley of the Mississippi cannot be without a powerful effect. But that, or any other incident of our own struggle, will be of secondary significance compared with the reverse sustained by the French arms in Mexico, the news of which must fall upon the Emperor with the emphasis of a lightning flash in a cloudless sky. It has been in spite of an unusually vigorous and daring opposition of the entire French Press not bought by Government, that this Mexican business was entered upon. The expedition has never had the support of French sentiment. No National feeling has been elicited; the masses have been content to regard the affair as one of the Emperor's eccentricities, which, while harmless and not putting the National fame in danger, would serve to amuse an idle army. The repulse of Puebla has awakened the French and effectually cured them of indifference. They will boldly accuse NAPOLEON, and NAPOLEON, restive under censure, as if less than an autocrat, will turn angrily upon the English, who inveigled him into a business so bad, and left him to flounder out as best he might. It is perfide Albion who will be held answerable for all the mischief. It was the English Cabinet, which, not satisfied with deserting an ally in extremities, and making an ignominious peace with a crouching enemy, published to the world a history of the transaction, tending to affix the worst possible motives to the French persistence. Readers of the TIMES have not forgotten the remarkable dispatch from Sir CHARLES WYKE, disclosing the nefarious nature of the claims upon which the French Envoy insisted at La Soledad, and to which neither the British or the Spanish Plenipotentiary could be brought to lend his sanction.

In the mutual criminations these facts will involve there will be the elements of misapprehension between the two nations, which must, for a time at least, disturb the cordial understanding essential to unity of action upon the American or any other question. It will be impossible to bring the two Governments upon any common plane. France, eager to regain the ground lost among the mountains of Mexico, will strain every resource to flood that Republic with victorious legions. The British Cabinet, challenged by a powerful opposition to a life and death struggle upon the terms of "recognition and reform," will be ill disposed to inaugurate a foreign policy involving serious expenditure, and leading to consequences any of which may easily be seized by a watchful enemy to dislodge them from power. Whatever, therefore, the positions of the French and British Foreign Offices, both will be dominated by events. Neither can act without the other. Both have their hands full—a foreign war and an impending ministerial crisis offering the amplest occupation to both. In this state of things lies the safety of the United States. It is with no blind confidence we can now say, give us days where we have been asking weeks, and the war will be ended, the apparent necessity of intervention averted, and the Union restored. At least may we prophesy, without hazard, that before NAPOLEON shall have reached the capital of Mexico, and completed his task of subduing the country, the authority of the Union will be restored throughout the South. There is small prospect, therefore, of France finding leisure or reason to take part in any other Oceanic conflict until that new upon her hands is disposed of. The whole drift of her policy was revolutionized at Puebla.

The Crucible of War.

The present war has changed many of the opinions of the world. It has effectually exploded the notion that Cotton is King. That supposed monarch is dethroned, and his own infatuated followers are now consigning the object of their idolatrous worship to the flames. No one commodity of commerce has ever before had such potent sway as Cotton, and cotton has failed to sustain the vices and violence of a stupendous insurrection against republicanism and civilization.

Another error exploded by the war is the belief of European politicians, that the American Republic had no inherent central and saving power to preserve it from intestine discord. Against foreign Governments the Union had always proved a unit. But monarchists and imperialists never believed the bond more than a rope of sand, if it should come to be tried by internal agitation. In the growing alienation between North and South, for some years past, these Anti-Republican prophets plainly foresaw the downfall of a Power of which they had become fearful and jealous. But time has falsified their faith, and henceforth the American Union will be regarded with an interest far deeper than ever before by the so-called "leading Powers" of the old world. It is not likely that a new convention could be called to meet in London, or near any other European Court, to decide the fate of Mexico, or any other country on this continent, to which the United States Government had not been invited to send a Commissioner, and found it agreeable to do so.

These are great revolutions in the commercial and in the political world. But we have an equally astounding revolution in the moral or social world, the effects of which will not fail to be felt in future in all circles of camp and court. The boasted "chivalry" of the South, which Southerners always arrogated, and which many Northern citizens somewhat reluctantly conceded, and Europe accepted as a fact, has been dissipated as a cheat and delusion.

"Chivalry" implied many things to the Southern mind. It meant high birth, to begin with. And here the ardent imagination of the Southrons reveled in complacent pride. South Carolina looked back to a little colony of Huguenots as the founders and fathers of her present heroic race. Old Virginia claimed the noble blood of the Cavaliers as the element that made her statesmen the leaders of the Republic for the first fifty years of its existence. While Louisiana and much of the valley of the Lower Mississippi was equally proud of a Gallic extraction. It was the special pride of all these Southron tribes to disown the "Puritanical" stock of New-England, and the sturdy Dutch infusion that had, in their opinion, debased the population of New-York, Pennsylvania, and the lesser Middle States. They were noble—these latter were ignoble. They were born of the gods—these latter "were of the earth, earthy"—and of the shop, "greasy."

"Blood will tell," boasted these arrogant slaveholders. They were high born, therefore they possessed all the traits that adorn high positions—a palpable non-sequitur, as history so uniformly shows. They assumed that they were gallant, polite, of indomitable spirit, and naturally warlike. They were the men to hew down great hecatombs of enemies; to rush upon the points of bayonets, to chase foes from every field; and after conquest, to spare the cravens whom it would be a dishonor to slay in cold blood. Or if such a programme were not from the first followed—if an enemy should come against them too numerous to be scattered by their stormy and right royal wrath—then they were the men to "shed the last drop of their blood," to "die in the last ditch," and astonish the world by the spectacle of a brave people seeking death rather than survive defeat. How many in the loyal States believed all this fustian, let the early sympathizers with treason bear witness. How many knavish men in England still pretend to believe it, let the perpetual croakings of the British Press testify.

We present the facts of the war, however, to the world, and ask their decision on the claims of rebel "chivalry." How is it in regard to the humane chivalry of the battle-field? how in regard to the treatment of captured prisoners? how in regard to the hundred other points which, in time of war, constitute the severest test of a Nation's civilization? The facts on these points, on the rebel side, are too dark to bear often repetition, while, our enemies themselves being witnesses, the Nationalists have been more than just—have been humane to a degree never before known in war.

How is it in regard to the chivalry's prowess? We point to Sumter, and boast of the chivalry of ANDERSON and his garrison of seventy men, who kept their colors flying until the flames were licking the lintels of the doo to their magazine, and the walls of the fort were crumbling before the batteries of seven thousand rebel troops. We point to the brave commander of the Cumberland, who refused to strike his colors to an iron sea-monster, and died his deat[illegible] as the waves were closing over [illegible] per deck. We point to Capt. McRae, who fought his battery against an overwhelming force of half-savage Texans, stood by his gun until every other man was shot down at his side, and then deliberately drew his pistols, as the infuriated assailants rushed upon him, and slew one, two, three, and a score of them, until he fell, riddled by a hundred bullets—never having yielded an inch.

Such are specimens of the fighting done by those who do not claim the bloody attributes of the Southern chivalry. We look in vain in all the history of the rebels for any deeds that approach these, or reach even the average of heroism. Where has any extraordinary achievement signalized either the army or the navy of the rebels? Not at Fort Donelson, where two generals ran away, and an army of 15,000 men surrendered without a death-struggle for escape or for victory; not at New-Orleans, where two forts, a formidable fleet and a large army surrendered, without losing one hundred men, all told; not in Elizabeth River, where the Merrimac, the "terror of her time," committed suicide, after her Commander had refused to take her on a perilous mission past Fortress Monroe; not at Yorktown, where the flower and strength of the rebel army grew pale behind their gigantic defences, and fled from the approaches of McCLELLAN. Nowhere on all the theatre of war can we find a spot that will live in history as a Southern Thermopylæ, made memorable by the heroic endurance or courage of Southern rebels—fighting, as they claim, for their homes, their negroes and their native land. Most weakly has the "Southern chivalry" failed to make good its claims.

The rebels have been arrogant and have paid the penalty. They are no better than other people—let them take care that they become no worse. There is danger of this latter, for conceit is the first phase of declining virtue. Let the rebels prune their vices, and all may yet be well. Let them study manhood, moderation, patience, subordination to law. Then, with an infusion among them of Northern industry and common sense, they and we will certainly become again, as we have been, A Great People.

The Ram Fleet in Action.

Capt. DAVIS, the flag-officer of the Western river fleet at Memphis, in his official report of the naval battle that resulted in the surrender of that place, gives great credit to Col. CHARLES ELLET, Jr., the commander of the Ram Fleet, which did such remarkable service in the engagement. This is the first naval fight in which ram met ram; and though there are no absolutely new principles in the science of naval warfare illustrated by it, it is important as initiating a kind of fighting which is not unlikely to be largely practiced in the future; and it is interesting as showing the great practical utility of aquatic rams. Prior to the arrival of ELLET's ram fleet, the battle of the gunboats was an affair which promised to be of dubious result. The swift craft of the rebels dodged the shot of our ponderous and clumsy iron-clad scows, and poured in an occasional fire with damaging effect. If, finally, they had been repulsed, they would have steamed off to some other point, (for they were swifter than our vessels,) and given us more trouble and further fight elsewhere. In fact, the rebel fleet was just in the act of seeking temporary safety by flight, when, (says a Western correspondent):

"Suddenly a tourist pulling a dashing as if Neptune himself was convulsing Father Mississippi, and out from among our gunboats darted the rams Queen and Monarch. With a speed that half buried her prow under water, the former struck boldly for the nearest Confederate. Immediately the fire of every gun was directed upon our adventurous little vessel. But she passed safely, the balls intended for her falling far beyond. On one vessel—the nearest—our little Queen bore down with a terrible velocity. It appeared as if at the shock both would be dashed to pieces, the rapid current aiding her powerful engines. A slight miscalculation on the part of the Queen, and desperate effort on the part of the rebel, enabled the latter to barely avoid her destructive adversary, and send a shot through in passing. The ram, however, with speed undiminished, brushing its opponent's stern and knocking off some railing, darted thirty yards further on and struck the Gen. Price amidships. The collision was fearful; the rebel gunboat's side crushed in like paper, and she careened until her pipes almost dipped the water. Just reaching land, she sank. The Monarch, no less boldly than her compeer, dashed among the rebel fleet, and singling out the Lovell, under full speed struck her fairly near the wheel, her prow crashing far into the hull, and remaining for a moment fastened as in a vice. The Lovell instantly commenced sinking, careening heavily on one side as the water rushed in."

The result of the ram operations, in Col. ELLET's own words, was, that "Three of the rebel rams and gunboats which were struck by my two rams, sunk outright and were lost; another, called the General Price, was but slightly injured." Immediately after this handsome feat, Col. ELLET, though severely wounded, steamed with his little craft down to Memphis. He was the first to inform the rebels there that their town was once more under the jurisdiction of the United States, and it was the ram fleet's flags that first waved over the captured city.

Ever since the opening of the war, Col. ELLET has been urging with great force, persistency and eloquence, the value of the ram principle in naval warfare. Not, however, until a short time ago, until after the Merrimac fight, was he listened to. He was then authorized to fit out five rams immediately, for the Mississippi. He at once went West to the Ohio River, bought five small, stout steamboats, put on beaks, or iron prows, strengthened their bows with iron-faced oak timber, and in a short time had them ready for active service. They carried no guns and had no protection from the rebel cannon, but were provided with sharpshooters, armed with rifles capable of picking off the enemy's men at a distance of half a mile. They were intended simply to show the virtues of rams, and Col. ELLET himself gallantly took command of the fleet. Their maneuvering with the rebel ram-boats was a most exciting episode, and will be read of with interest by naval officers all over the world.

The result splendidly justified all Col. ELLET's predictions. And his own intrepidity on the occasion, his skill, science and daring, add new laurels to his former reputation as the first of American Engineers.

[illegible] the coming Fourth of July no less than witnessed in the history of the country. We do not hear, however, that New-York, the Metropolis of the Union, "has yet done anything for, or even begun thinking of a fitting observance of the natal day of the Republic." Why this languor and indifference? Why are our City Fathers not bestirring themselves? Where are the preparations for our military reviews, our processions, our orations, our illuminations? We have but one suggestion to make about the observance. It should be as unlike as possible the customary observances of the occasion, with no little or no trace of the fuss, fire and [illegible] of [illegible] the elegance traditionally associated with the Fourth of July. There is need of some more patriotic enthusiasm in the community to make wholly unnecessary all [illegible] mock-heroic patriotism. We would have it an original, genuine and [illegible] festivities, worthy of the superb events that have crowded the year since the last Fourth of July. But for the [illegible] and [illegible] ation are necessary; and the City authorities, societies and the whole community should now be busy planning and preparing.

WAR BULLETIN.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
WASHINGTON, June 16, 1862.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 44.—Surgeon DAVID S. HAYS, One Hundred and Tenth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, having been ordered to report to this city a large detachment of sick and wounded men, and having shamefully neglected them after their arrival, the President directs that for this gross dereliction of duty he be dismissed the service, and he is hereby accordingly dismissed.

By order of the Secretary of War.

L. THOMAS, Adjutant-General.

E. D. TOWNSEND, Asst Adjt-General.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Monday, June 16.

NEWS AT THE WAR DEPARTMENT.

Dispatches of this date from Gen. HUNTER have been received at the War Department. They present no new features with regard to Hindman's army, which is supposed to still remain in the vicinity of Okalona, Cypress and Guntown.

Dispatches from the army of the Potomac dated 5 o'clock this evening, indicate that all is quiet in front of Richmond.

Gen. DIX informs the Department that the military telegraph has been completed to Norfolk and Suffolk.

The line to Fortress Monroe is working well.

A SURGEON DISMISSED.

Dr. HAYS, Surgeon of the One Hundred and Tenth Pennsylvania Regiment, was dismissed the service by Secretary STANTON, for neglect of duty. He arrived here on Saturday evening, about 9 o'clock, from the Shenandoah, in charge of over three hundred wounded, whom, it is charged, he left all night uncared for, in the cars, neglecting, so stated in my dispatch of yesterday, to report to Gen. WADSWORTH or the Surgeon-General. Having his interview this morning with the Secretary of War, he frankly stated that he failed to find the Surgeon-General, and that he did all in his power to make the men as comfortable as possible under the circumstances. He admitted the fact, however, that he spent the night at WILLARD'S, and Mr. STANTON, after reading over to him the report of the Surgeon-General, properly recommending severe punishment, ordered the Adjutant-General at once to strike his name from the rolls of the army.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL THOMAS.

A statement appeared a few days since in a New-York paper, under the head of Washington Dispatches, reflecting upon the character and official integrity of Brig.-Gen. THOMAS, Adjutant-General of the army. This statement having been republished in other journals, and a paragraph of like import appearing in the TIMES, it is proper to state that the story is entirely devoid of foundation. Gen. THOMAS has not been suspended. No Court of Inquiry investigating any act of his is being held or contemplated, nor has any has not been questioned now or at any time by the President or Secretary of War. There has been no intention of removing him, either temporarily or permanently, and no one is more ready than Secretary STANTON to testify to the Adjutant-General's fidelity, efficiency and patriotism. It is well known, too, that the ladies of his family are uncompromising loyal. The husband of his only daughter, and her two brothers are now in the Army of the Potomac, and in the recent engagements were conspicuous for their gallantry and courage. Gen. THOMAS expects, by the faithful performance of his duties, like other patriots, to make some enemies, and to be subject to criticism, but the female members of his family should at least be exempt from unjust imputations.

THE MOVEMENTS OF BEAUREGARD.

The movements of BEAUREGARD remain as mysterious as ever. It is surmised that the force which is said to have defeated Gen. WILLIAMS at Baton Rouge is the advance of BEAUREGARD'S army on the way to New-Orleans. Another opinion is that his columns are turned in the direction of Port Royal, and that HUNTER may be driven into the water by a superior force. It is stated, however, that the dispatches from Gen. HALLECK do not indicate any cause for apprehension. It is certain that the War Department is fully alive to any contingency, and every possible step is taken to give the enemy a fitting reception at every point.

THE CASE OF GEN. BANKS.

A Court of Inquiry into the case of Gen. BANKS convened to-day at the White House, Virginia. It is believed that the General will be completely vin-

SOMETHING FOR EVERY LADY.—DR. WARD'S Great Benefactor. The great periodical remedy, infallible for the immediate removal of monthly obstructions. Office, No. 12 Laight-st., near Canal, where Dr. WARD can be consulted confidentially, day or evening.

PRIVATE CONSULTATION.—DR. HUNTER for thirty years, confined his attention to diseases of a certain class. In which he has treated no less than fifty thousand cases, without an instance of failure. His great remedy, HUNTER'S RED DROP, cures certain diseases, when regular treatment and all other remedies fail; cures without dieting or restriction in the habits of the patient; cures without the disgusting and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours; cures without the dreadful consequent effects of mercury, but possesses the peculiarly valuable property of annihilating the rank and poisonous taint that the blood is sure to absorb, unless his remedy is used. This is what he claims for it, and what no other will accomplish. Its value in this respect has become so well known, that scientific men in every department of medical knowledge begin to appreciate it, for hardly a week passes that he is not consulted by druggists, chemists and physicians, in regard to some private patient, who has exhausted the whole field of the faculty, and still the disease will appear. Its popularity is so great, that there is not a quack doctor in the City that has not attempted it; and when they find their lies are not so easily swallowed, they then pretend that they can make it. It is $1 a vial, and cannot be obtained genuine anywhere but at the old office, No. 5 Division-st. Book for 25 three-cent stamps, 192 pages, 100 colored illustrations. The best work out.
